

I am very proud of the Oasis 2025 Annual Report. After a series of challenging years through and following the pandemic, Oasis has “found its footing” with a rapidly growing community of older adults taking classes, joining exercise programs, traveling with us, teaching peers, and volunteering in meaningful ways.

My enthusiasm for Oasis is fueled by the breadth of our work, and how we touch many elements of active and healthy aging. Among the myriad approaches to active aging, volunteering is the fastest growing impact area, with positive outcomes for both the volunteering older adults and the communities they engage with. Volunteering has been a vital part of Oasis since its inception. This aspect of our mission was amplified in 1989 with the founding of the intergenerational literacy tutoring program. Today, more than 3,000 Oasis volunteers participate in literacy tutoring, with a growing cohort participating in our new mathematics tutoring model.

Additionally, Oasis is piloting Grand Champions, a program that engages older adults as mentors for children within the foster care system, teaching important life skills. Oasis volunteers help run our offices and are a key part of operations and program support in St. Louis and nationwide. Through the Community Care Corps, Oasis has funded over 150 nonprofits nationwide to develop innovative approaches for volunteers to support low-income caregivers.

At Oasis, we want the perception of older adults to be actively changed, and we feel that one way to change misperceptions is to highlight the immense impact of older adults as volunteers in our communities. We continue to explore new ways for older adults to be levers for social impact, and this approach to active aging positively impacts both older adults and the communities they engage with.

We're grateful to our community, whose generosity makes this possible. If you feel inspired, please consider making a gift today.

Inspiring Stories From Our Community

At Oasis, people find more than just classes—they discover community, purpose, and the joy of lifelong learning. Whether it's joining a discussion group, improving balance through fitness, volunteering with children, or learning to use a smartphone with confidence, every experience is designed to enhance well-being and connection to others.

“Oasis always has relevant subjects that are well presented, educational and informative. The presenters are great and encourage questions and discussions. If you haven't experienced Oasis, I urge you to take a look at the classes offered. I haven't been disappointed yet and I'm sure that you won't be either.”

“I have Oasis to thank for getting back into biking, making new friends, and learning about the area where I live. We are so fortunate to have Oasis here; there's something for everyone—Oasis is truly the 'Gateway' to having an enriching life!”

—Oasis Biking Participant

“The Give 5 program was such a great learning experience for me. It introduced me to so many ways I can help and be a part of my community.”

—Oasis Give 5 Participant

“What surprised me most about my tutoring experience was the profound bond I formed with my students. I didn't expect to become so deeply invested in their progress and well-being, but witnessing their growth and resilience has been awe-inspiring.”
